

ANITA'S LETTER

If you're reading this, it's probably because you have one or more business challenges that are taking up your time, headspace, and money. (In fact, they're probably taking up even more money than you know.)

That's why I started HR One Consulting: to help executives and business owners solve their human resources challenges in a practical and cost-effective manner that works for their business.

Whether it's finding the right employees or making sure that your processes are ethical and professional, HR can be a tricky business.

As an entrepreneur, I understand your business needs and challenges in a way that an average HR consultant cannot.

As an HR consultant for over ten years, I've worked with a broad spectrum of private sector organizations and industries. In addition, my experience in the high tech sector and project management industries means I understand the business needs unique to organizations in these sectors.

Many of my clients estimate that I've saved them up to tens of thousands of dollars. How do I do that? Sometimes it's by helping businesses find the 'best of the best' talent and securing a strong retention rate. Other times it's by ensuring legal compliancy without involving lawyers or by implementing efficient HR processes and securing exceptional rates for group benefits and disability management. In every situation, I make sure that you get the right tools that suit your business needs.

If you think my services may be helpful to you, please give me a call. Let's find out how I can take your HR headache off your mind!
